THE ALGER, JACKSON, and HUBBELL ANCESTORS

JUN 2

Introduction

In these pages are compiled the names, dates, occupations, and other bits of information for the direct ancestors of the ALGER, JACKSON, and HUBBELL families. The three primary families considered are those of:

No. 1-1-1 CAPT. PHILIP ROUNSEVILLE ALGER, U.S.N. (1859-1912)

No. 5-1-1 LOUISA TAYLOR (Mrs. P. R. Alger) (1866-1962)

No. 9-1-1 PROFESSOR DUGALD CALEB JACKSON (1865-1951)

No. 13-1-1 MABEL AUGUSTA FOSS (Mrs. D. C. Jackson) (1867-1960)

No. 17-1-1 THE REV. WILLIAM NATHAN HUBBELL (1934)

No. 10-1-1 KATHERINE DETWEILER PRICE (Mrs. W. N. Hubbell) (1867-1957)

1963877

The direct ancestors of these six individuals are given, going back as many generations as could be determined, including whenever possible the first of each name to come to America and tracing the lines back to historic characters in the old world. The names of all direct ancestors are printed in capital letters; step-parents and others in small letters. Brothers, sisters, and collateral lines are not given except for a few particularly interesting individuals.

Before entering into details, we may well inquire what is the purpose of such painstaking delvings into the forgotten past? And what is the value of the data that have been obtained?

For the compilers, it has been fun to delve into family lore, to visit libraries, churches, and cemeteries, and to reconstruct the past from old records and slender clues. Also, it has been most interesting to learn who our ancestors were, how they lived, what adventures and trials they went through, and what ideals they lived by. And, it is a continual source of inspiration to realize what heights they rose to when faced by great trials or opportunities. Reading their records imparts strength and confidence in meeting one's own trials.

History comes alive when read in terms of one's own ancestors. One can see how ethics, compassion, and honesty have improved over the years, along with advances in scientific knowledge and engineering achievements. Thus, one develops a sense of perspective, and gains confidence in the continued progress of mankind, despite many setbacks along the road.

Going back a few centuries, one finds that many famous individuals are connected in one way or another with the family tree.

Introduction

In these pages are compiled the names, dates, occupations and other bits of information for the direct ancestors of the ALGER, JACKSON, and HUBBELL families. The three primary families considered are those of:

No. 1-1-1	CAPT. PHILIP ROUNSEVILLE ALGER, U.S.N.	(1859-1912)
No. 5-1-1	LOUISA TAYLOR (Mrs. P. R. Alger)	(1866-1962)
No. 9-1-1	PROFESSOR DUGALD CALEB JACKSON	(1865-1951)
No. 13-1-1	MABEL AUGUSTA FOSS (Mrs. D. C. Jackson)	(1867-1960)
No. 17-1-1	THE REV. WILLIAM NATHAN HUBBELL	(1862-1934)
No. 10-1-1	KATHERINE DETWEILER PRICE (Mrs. W. N. Hubbell)	(1867-1957)

The direct ancestors of these six individuals are given, going back as many generations as could be determined, including whenever possible the first of each name to come to America; and tracing a few lines back to historic characters in the old world. The names of all direct ancestors are printed in capital letters; step-parents and others in small letters. Brothers, sisters, and collateral lines are not given except for a few particularly interesting individuals.

Before entering into details, we may well inquire what is the purpose of such painstaking delvings into the forgotten past? And what is the value of the data that have been obtained?

For the compilers, it has been fun to delve into family lore, to visit libraries, churches, and cemeteries; and to reconstruct the past from old records and slender clues. Also, it has been most interesting to learn who our ancestors were, how they lived, what adventures and trials they went through, and what ideals they lived by. And, it is a continual source of inspiration to realize what heights they rose to when faced by great trials or opportunities. Reading their records imparts strength and confidence in meeting one's own trials.

History comes alive when read in terms of one's own ancestors. One can see how ethics, compassion, and honesty have improved over the years, along with advances in scientific knowledge and engineering achievements. Thus, one develops a sense of perspective, and gains confidence in the continued progress of mankind, despite many setbacks along the road.

Going back a few centuries, one finds that many famous individuals are connected in one way or another with the family tree.

For example, a great many of the English families that came to America in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries could show some connection with the nobility, from which a royal descent could be traced. Once a kingly ancestor has been established, reference to the encyclopedia will quickly show descent from William The Conqueror, or at any rate from Charlemagne. After all, Charlemagne lived 1200 years, or 40 generations, ago, so that a present-day descendant can trace only one part in a thousand billion ($1/2^{40}$) of his inheritance to the great emperor. We are all descended many times from Charlemagne. Generally speaking, one can not claim any virtue whatever by right of descent from any ancestor of more than 200 years ago. For every ancestor six generations back, there are 63 other ancestors who contributed equally to one's inheritance.

Thus, it seems to the compilers of these pages far more interesting and pertinent to collect all one's ancestors, rather than following the usual bent of tracing descent from a single remote individual. In following this road, one soon comes to feel akin to the old sailor who survived the wreck of his ship by eating his shipmates one by one:

> Oh, I am the cook and the captain too,
> And the mate of the Nancy brig,
> And the boatswain tight and the midshipmite,
> And the crew of the captain's gig.

While we have not come by our qualities by eating any one, we certainly do have a most marvelous and varied makeup, derived from ancestors of many races, countries, religions, and abilities.

The Twenty Families

Recognizing that most people are interested in only a few family names, the ancestors of the six individuals listed above are divided into the 20 families of their grandparents. Since 9-1-1 and 10-1-1 were first cousins, there are only 20 grandparents, instead of the usual 24. These 20 families are listed in Table I, on the following page, with the name of the first generation individual in each, and the page numbers on which their data are given.

Each individual in the compilation is assigned a three-part serial number. The first unit of the serial is the number of the family, as given in Table I. The second unit is the number of the generation, counting backward in time. That is, the six primary individuals all have "1" for their second number, their 12 parents all have the number "2", and their grandparents the number "3", and so on. The third unit of the serial is the number assigned to the particular individual in his family and generation.

On each page, the name of an individual is placed at the center of the left-hand column, his parents' names are placed in the second column, with the father above and the mother below, and the grandparents are placed in the same order in the right-hand column. Some pages give three instead of only two generations. The individuals are numbered from the top down, so that men always have odd numbers and women even numbers (except for the primary individuals listed in Table I). Step-parents have a small letter added after their third serial unit. Individuals who are ancestors through more than one line are given two or more numbers, as required. For example, Isaac Allerton, of the Mayflower, has the numbers 1-10-99 and also 5-8-13, as shown in Table II, page 5.

The pages are given two-part serial numbers. The first unit of the page number indicates the family, as in Table I. The second unit is the number of the individual page, assigned consecutively, going backward in time. To provide flexibility and allow the addition of extra pages at any point without disturbing the numbering of pages already in place, a block of page numbers is assigned to each name in the right-hand column of each page. The page numbers are consecutive for the principal family names of the third, fourth, and fifth generations, so far as feasible. If more pages are required than those set aside, additional pages are provided, with a small letter after the second unit. When some assigned numbers are not needed, these are omitted. Thus, there are many gaps and irregularities in the page numbering.

Some Interesting Ancestors

Table II, page 5, lists the 23 Mayflower Pilgrims who were direct ancestors of one or more of the six primary individuals listed above. As the Mayflower came in 1620, some 240 years ago, these Pilgrim ancestors were mostly 7th great grandparents. Each contributed about one part in 500 to the inheritance of the primary individuals, a quite insignificant amount. However, it is interesting to see how the Pilgrim influence has spread, and at any rate the records give admittance to historical societies of one sort or another.

* Generation of earliest arrivals in America

Going a little further back in time, two of the ancestors--JOHN ROGERS and ROWLAND TAYLOR--were Protestant martyrs, who were burned in 1555 by order of Queen Mary. Many were engaged in the wars of the Roses and the Scotch-English battles of the 14th and 15th centuries. Henry Percy, called Hotspur, was an ancestor, and so was Sir John Montgomery, who captured him at the Battle of Otterburn in 1388, and thereby obtained a great ransom, as told by Sir Walter Scott. Among the ancestors on American soil were English, Scotch, and Irish--also Huguenots and Danes, German Dunkers, and one American Indian--a varied and colorful list of people.

Table III, page 6, gives the approximate number of direct ancestors in each generation for each of the 20 families that are given in the following pages. Evidently, the list is very far from complete, for the years before 1700.

It is intended at a later date to add pages giving the descendants of the six primary individuals, including all the children, grandchildren, and great grandchildren. The data for these pages will need to come from the younger generation members for whom these records have been compiled.

Sources

The records given here have been obtained from many sources, a few of which are listed on the pages to which they apply. The principal sources of information have been the historical sections of the public libraries in New York, Boston, and Albany; the Congressional Library in Washington; the New England Genealogical and Historical Society Library in Boston; and the Historical Societies in Philadelphia, Louisville (Kentucky), and elsewhere. The seven volumes of the Compendium of American Genealogy have also provided much useful information.

Despite every effort to avoid errors, there undoubtedly are a good many incorrect items in this work. As one goes back in the years, more and more data are obtained from copying or recopying of old records with consequent chance for error. Records are often conflicting, and the change in the calendar adds uncertainty.

The writers would like errors and omissions to be called to their attention.

SUPPLEMENT

Descendants of the Three Primary Families

Table IV, page 9, lists all the brothers and sisters of the six members of generation 1, as given in Table I. There were 29 individuals in these six families, 19 of whom married, three of them twice. These 22 families of generation 0 had 46 children in all. The numbers assigned to these families are 1 to 6 inclusive, and 21 to 35 inclusive, as listed in Table IV. More complete information is given for the Alger family in Table V, page 10, and for the Taylor family in Table VI, page 11.

The members of generation 0, who are children of generation 1, are given the number 01, their children in turn the number 02, and their grandchildren 03, and so on. The children of the three primary families, 10 in all, are listed in Table VII, page 12. Seven of these married, and their children numbered 18. These 18 members of the 01 generation, in turn, are listed in Table VIII, page 14. Up to April 1, 1962, 13 of these have married, and they have a total of 31 children, in generation 02.
